CHAMBER SEEKS RELOCATION OF REVENUE OFFICE

Appeals to Blakely D. McCaughn, Collector at Philadelphia, to Return Office.

Placing its collective shoulder to the wheel by action of the board of directors, the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce will make every effort possible to have the office of a deputy collector of internal revenue relocated here.

Recently it became known that David G. Bowman, for several years deputy collector of internal revenue, with an office in the federal building, Baltimore street, was removed to York, to the district office, and that henceforth Gettysburg and Adams county would be without his services, except at certain periods of the year, and then only for a few days at a time.

At the February meeting of the directors of the Gettysburg Chamber, held at the secretary's office at the court house, Monday evening, the following communication to Blakely D. McCaughn, collector of internal revenue for this section of Pennsylvania, with headquarters in Philadelphia, was read and unanimously approved:

C. C. Letter

"For many years there has been located in Gettysburg a deputy collector of internal revenue. Formerly his activities were largely in connection with various tobacco and cigar factories in the county. In recent years he has rendered very valuable service to the business men of the county and to citizens generally, in making their tax reports and returns.

"His recent removal has been a serious loss to the community through the inconvenience and hardship it has caused those who have heretofore depended upon his assistance in making their returns. The very limited time his services are available now causes a very undesirable congestion, many people standing in line for half a day before reaching his office.

"You can readily see what such a condition means to the average business man who cannot afford to stand in the waiting line. Moreover, in many cases it necessitates additional expense through the employment of a private tax expert and not infrequently a delay in making the return.

"The board of directors of the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce invites your attention to this situation and respectfully requests that the deputy collector be relocated in Gettysburg, as heretofore."

Supplement Appeal

With the sending of this communication today, Millard B. Simmons, secretary of the commerce organization, urged the general membership of the Chamber of Commerce and residents of Gettysburg and Adams county to supplement the appeal that the office be relocated here.

"When Mr. McCaughn realizes that so many taxpayers in Gettysburg and Adams county are affected by the removal of the office and the services of a deputy collector of internal revenue, he will probably be more anxious to have the office relocated here," Mr. Simmons said, in urging that supplemental letters be written to Mr. McCaughn.

According to Secretary Simmons, Postmaster R. C. Miller will go to Philadelphia with the express idea of waiting upon Mr. McCaughn to urge him to relocate a deputy collector here, and convey to him the feeling of Adams county taxpayers in regard to the question.

Gettysburg has had a deputy collector's office and services since the Civil War period. Recently, however, the local office was closed and Mr. Bowman, present deputy collector, called in to the York office. In a schedule of days in which he will be able to help Gettysburg and Adams county taxpayers in making out and filing their income tax returns, the time was reduced by several days, throwing an additional burden upon those who must pay incomes, it was stated.

Balks Toll Bridge

In addition to its action on the collector of revenue issue, the board of directors added its protest to Chambers of Commerce in York and Lancaster to the erection of a toll bridge over the Susquehanna river at Wrightsville, by a private company. "Toll bridges have taken their place with toll roads in the realm of things archaic," members of the board declared.

Entrance of Cave Where Collins Lost His Life

He reported, however, that he had found a secret cavern, for which he had been exploring for some time.

C-C LUNCHEON ON WEDNESDAY

Gael S. Hoag, National Vice-President of Lincoln Highway Association, to Speak.

A noon luncheon meeting of the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Gettysburg with Gael S. Hoag, national vice president and field secretary of the Lincoln Highway Association, as the speaker will be the order of the morning according to an announcement issued from the chamber office this morning by Millard B. Simmons, secretary.

The meeting was arranged when it became known that Mr. Hoag will be in Gettysburg and could be secured as a speaker. He will make an address at the annual dinner of the Chambersburg Chamber of Commerce at the Hotel Washington in Chambersburg this evening immediately following which he will come to Gettysburg, remaining until Wednesday afternoon for the special purpose of meeting with the Gettysburg chamber members upon invitation of the local organization after which he will go to Lancaster and Philadelphia.

Notices Sent Out

The Chamber of Commerce office in the court house was the scene of much activity this morning in getting notices out and arranging all the details of the meeting.

Mr. Simmons made the following statement relative to the affair:

"It is regrettable that we could not give more advance notice of this meeting, but even that should not keep the attendance down. We have asked that each member as soon as he receives this afternoon the card mailed him this morning to immediately telephone the chamber office and make reservations for the dinner. No more places will be provided than are reserved.

"We are indeed fortunate in procuring Mr. Hoag as the speaker. He enjoys a wide acquaintance in Gettysburg and those who know him speak well of him in every respect. We are looking forward to a big attendance."

Cook Urges Response

C. W. Cook, president of the Chamber of Commerce, is anxious that the attendance be large.

"Gettysburg has always been favored by the Lincoln Highway Association and since the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce has sponsored the movement of reviving interest in the Lincoln Highway over Pennsylvania it is our duty to turn out at this meeting. Mr. Hoag has always had a warm spot in his heart for Gettysburg and it will not only be a good speaker on a good subject that we will have, but it will be a general good-fellowship meeting with a good friend."

SIMMONS HEADS BOND COMMITTEE

Millard B. Simmons, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, Gettysburg, has been appointed chairman of the Adams County Publicity Committee for the forest bond issue campaign by the State Conservation Council.

Under the direction of Mr. Simmons, an active committee will be organized in Adams county to conduct the drive for approval by the legislature and by the public of the proposed state loan of $25,000,000 for the acquisition of millions of acres of wild mountain land in Pennsylvania for forest purposes.

The Adams County Committee will collect subscriptions to the Conservation Council's publicity fund, will interview members of the State Senate and House of Representatives respecting the merits of the project, and will build-up favorable public sentiment for the bond issue.

MRS. HOLTZWORTH DIES EARLY TODAY

Mrs. Cecilia Josephine Holtzworth, widow of George H. Holtzworth, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Emory Williams, Hanover street, at 7 o'clock this morning, from the effects of a stroke suffered a week ago. She was 77 years old, and a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Miller.

Mrs. Holtzworth was born in Adams county and spent her entire life in the county. She had been a native of Gettysburg for thirty-five years. She was a life-long member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The deceased is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Williams, with whom she resided, and Mrs. Paul G. Basehoar, of Philadelphia; also two brothers, the Rev. George Miller, of Chicago, and Israel Miller, of Philadelphia. Five grandchildren also survive.

Funeral notice later.

Haines Funeral Services Thursday

Funeral services for Oliver A. Haines, prominent resident of Silver Run, who died early Monday morning, will be held Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock, instead of 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, as previously announced. All services will be from the house. Interment will be in Union Cemetery, Silver Run.

CLUB MEMBERS HEAR HISTORIAN

Lions Club Is Addressed by Daniel C. Jacobs, Arendtsville, on Early Warfare History of Gettysburg.

"Pioneer Adams countians fought on every battlefield in American history, but only one fight was ever staged on this soil, and that was the battle of Gettysburg," Daniel C. Jacobs, of Arendtsville, member of the Pennsylvania historical society and an authority on early Adams county history, declared in concluding an address before the Lions club at its weekly meeting at the Hotel Gettysburg, Monday evening.

The address of Mr. Jacobs was replete with dates, names of pioneer settlers in this section of Pennsylvania and historic incidents, and proved one of the most interesting talks before the Lions in recent weeks. The historian began by reciting dates and events back as far as 1608, when John Smith came to this country. In the year 1615, the first white man crossed the eastern part of Pennsylvania, the speaker said.

Of particular interest was that part of Mr. Jacobs' address in which he told of the life and activities of Captain Hans Hamilton, progenitor of the Hamilton families now residing in this section. Captain Hamilton, according to Mr. Jacobs, with a body of men recruited from this section, went to the aid of Colonel George Washington, fighting against the Indians, helping in the defense of Fort Littleton, near McConnellsbury, and afterward becoming the first sheriff of York county, which then embraced Adams county. He also was a judge, the speaker related.

Death at the age of 56 years cut short a life of unusual promise in the case of Captain Hamilton, Mr. Jacobs declared. His body now lies just inside the gates of Evergreen cemetery, said the speaker.

Details of the life of John Hanson Steelman, first permanent white settler west of the Susquehanna river, to whom a marker was dedicated near Zora late last year, were also worked into the address of the local historian, which shed new light on the character and activities of this pioneer settler.

The Lions have accepted an invitation to dine at the annual Washington's birthday dinner of the Daughters of the American Revolution next week.

$116,457.29 DUE FOR NEW ROADS

Adams County to be Benefited Considerably If Road Bond Issue Is Approved by Legislators.

AWAITS PASSAGE

Over a year ago the department of highways announced that if the voters of Pennsylvania approved the $50,000,000 bond issue $10,000,000 of that sum would be allotted to the various counties of the state. Of this $10,000,000 Adams county would receive $129,873.45.

The commissioners have informed the department that with the money allotted to this county they constructed route 231, extending 5.77 miles through Mt. Pleasant township. The balance due this county in the amount of $116,457.29 is unencumbered.

Construction of these routes from the bond-aid fund is dependent upon the passage by the present legislature of an act authorizing the highway department to use the $50,000,000 in bonds.

These bonds were voted by the people in 1923 by a majority of 375,000—a majority of 113,000 greater than that given the first bond issue in 1918. But in the spring of 1923 the legislature, seeking to take time by the forelock, passed a bill termed a general enabling act and designed to cover all future bond issues by the state. In the summer of 1924 the state asked for bids for the $50,000,000 in road bonds. Bankers, however, refused to bid because their attorneys told them the enabling act passed by the 1923 legislature was unconstitutional. The matter was taken into the courts and finally the supreme court decided the 1923 legislation was faulty. For this reason, if the department of highways is to carry out the mandate of the people as expressed in the vote of November, 1923, the present session of the legislature must pass an enabling act.

Unless the legislature passes the new enabling act none of the sections mentioned above can be built.

GRANGE CITES FARMERS' NEEDS

Legislative Proposals Sent to Senator Reed; Six Major Items Included in Report to Secretary.

Reduction in freight rates, the same tariff protection for agriculture as for industry and labor, and enlarged marketing and purchasing powers for farmers' cooperative associations, freed from governmental control, are the major recommendations of the State Grange to United States Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, as the topics of congressional legislation most helpful to farmers of Pennsylvania at the present time.

The position of the grange was made public last night by Fred Brenckman, secretary of the State Grange, in a letter to Senator Reed, replying to Reed's inquiry regarding how the preliminary report of the agricultural commission, named by President Coolidge, would meet the problems of the farmers of this state.

A brief summary of the recommendations of the grange as outlined in Secretary Brenckman's letter is:

"1. Enactment of a proper 'truth in fabrics' bill.
"2. Adequate appropriations for agricultural experiment stations and for the control of insect pests and diseases of livestock.
"3. The proper regulation of freight rates. We believe rates could be reduced to all shippers without harm to the carriers if the railroads were properly organized and conducted.

"4. The same tariff protection for agriculture as is accorded industry and labor. For many years, agriculture has labored under the handicap of buying its supplies in a protected market, while being obliged to sell its products at substantially the world's price. Our position on this is in accord with the action of the National Board of Farm Organizations at Washington, last week. We understand that you have been furnished with copies of the resolutions adopted at that meeting. The State Grange is affiliated with the National Board of Farm Organizations.

Unrestricted Cooperation
"5. The granting of the broadest powers to farmers' cooperative marketing and purchasing organizations, free from governmental interference and control. In this respect the attitude of the National Board of Farm Organizations (Continued on Second Page)

May Seal Collins in His Cavern Sepulchre Due to Hazardous Conditions

Workmen Withdrawn From Hole; Declare It Is "Foolish" To Risk Human Life For The Sake Of Recovering Body; Would Sever Arm Or Head To Prove Collins Is Really In Cave.

Sand Cave, Feb. 17.—Nature was still refusing this morning to give up even temporarily her victim, Floyd Collins, whose body was reached Monday afternoon in Sand Cave, where he had been trapped 17 days.

Treacherous conditions in the old cave passage where Collins was caught in a natural rock trap during an exploring expedition made so perilous the efforts of workers to release the body that they were withdrawn from the hole early this morning.

As a last resort to get out the body, workmen at 8:30 o'clock resumed digging a new passage in an attempt to go around-about way to reach Collins.

So hazardous were conditions in the natural passage that for a time serious consideration was given to a plan to seal Collins in his prison tomb and make it his final sepulchre.

Officials pointed out that to risk human life for the sake of recovering the body would be foolish and considered conferring with members of Collins' family and with Governor Fields.

Conditions Dangerous

H. T. Carmichael in charge of the shaft announced he advocated amputating the head or arm of Collins to convince the public he really is there and then return the severed member to its proper position and seal the prison tomb.

Carmichael in emphasizing his recommendation for burial in the present position said he suggests this mode to be followed due to the hazardous condition of the timbers in the shaft.

Lee Collins, aged father of the cave victim, told newspaper men today he did not favor severing part of his boy's body for identification purposes and that he would rather have the body remain in its present position than to ask workmen to further undergo the risk of their lives.

The proposed amputation of Collins' left foot which is pinned by a large rock into a crevice which formed a natural vise was found impracticable as surgeons were unable to reach his foot.

Collins' father has given permission for amputation of the feet.

"I am satisfied in my mind that Floyd Collins' body will never be brought to the surface," said Mr. Carmichael. "Conditions are getting worse every minute. The walls may collapse at any time."

Brigadier-General H. H. Denhart, of the Kentucky National Guard, assumed complete control of the rescue crew who found Floyd Collins in Sand Cave, Cave City, Monday afternoon.

REPAIR SECTION IS RECOGNIZED

Eighteen Men Are Inducted Into Guard Service at Federal Inspection on Monday.

Eighteen men were inducted into the 105th motor repair section, 28th division, Pennsylvania National Guards, at a muster and inspection at the unit's armory in the Weaver building, Center Square, Monday evening.

Two regular United States Army officers, two national guard officers and one non-commissioned officer of the regular army participated in the exercises, which mark the formal beginning of the unit's existence in Gettysburg. The motor repair unit formerly was stationed at Harrisburg.

Lieutenant Howard Armor, East Middle street, is the commanding officer of the outfit, composed, for the most part, of experienced automobile mechanics.

The induction exercises were in charge of Captain Robert King, of the National Guards, and Captain George W. Philip, of the United States Army. The oath of allegiance was taken by the men, and from that time their pay as members of the national guard (Continued on Second Page).

MORE DETAILS OF FINANCIAL BUBBLE

(By Associated Press)

Santa Barbara, Cal., Feb. 17.—More details of an alleged $20,000,000 financial bubble were revealed today in an 800-page schedule of liabilities filed with the United States Commissioner by attorneys for E. G. Lewis, promoter, who is involved in bankruptcy proceedings.

Lewis' creditors consisting mainly of persons who loaned him money on personal notes number approximately 25,000, it is said. The notes more than $10,000.00 and the total liabilities will reach $20,000,000.

It is alleged that in borrowing money Lewis promised to refund the original loan and to pay in addition a bonus which ran in some instances as high as 100 per cent.

YORK AUDIENCE LIKES GLEE CLUB

Gettysburg College Organization Pleases Large Crowd in High School Auditorium.

The splendid program of vocal and instrumental music presented at the concert given by the Gettysburg College Glee Club captivated the large audience that comfortably filled the auditorium of the high school building in York last evening. From the first notes of the overture "Evening Song," by the glee club, the program pleased and delighted. Selections by the glee club especially appreciated were the sprightly songs, "When Yo' Head Am Bowed," "Trim Ship" and "Travelin' to de Grave." The orchestra made quite a hit in its selection "War March," from the Priests of Athalia, Mendelssohn. Other numbers which pleased were the solo, "Roses of Picardy," by C. S. Thomas, who was obliged to respond with several encore numbers, and the quartet who sang, "A Little Close Harmony." They also received their merit of applause.

The second part of the program was a laughable sketch of a restaurant scene with all the musicians assembled on the stage. The mimicry of several of the chief actors in the scene was highly amusing. Quips and light badinage with singing and music kept the audience in continual good humor. The proceeds of the affair will be devoted to the fund of the new Y. M. C. A. building on the campus of the college at Gettysburg.

On Wednesday evening the glee club will render a concert in Brua Chapel.

Major G. P. Drake

Assisting these officers with the muster and inspection of the headquarters, equipment and facilities of the unit were Major George P. Drake and Captain J. H. Kreider, both national guardsmen, and Sergeant McGuire, an army man.

The officers told the men that the national and state army officials were proud to have a unit of the national guards at Gettysburg, because of its historic connections. They urged the men to attend the weekly drills and the annual summer encampment at Mount Gretna. They said that regular inspections of the unit would be made to see the progress of the repair section.

Uniforms for the men, which they will be compelled to wear only on drill nights, when called out for duty in emergency or at the annual encampment, will be received before next Monday evening, Lieutenant Arnór stated.

SIX APPLY FOR STATE PARDONS

Largest Number of Applications in One Month Ever Considered by Board.

Six applications for commutation of sentences are scheduled for consideration by the state board of pardons at Harrisburg this week for February. This is the largest number of such applications in any one month in several years, Francis H. Hoy, Jr., secretary of the board, said.

Several of the applicants, all of whom were convicted of murder in the first degree, have been given respite a number of times. All now face execution in March unless the board acts favorably on their applications, or Governor Pinchot either issues further respite or recalls the death warrants.

Three of the applicants, Joseph McManus, Andrew Lawrence and Charles W. Oefinger, are from Philadelphia. McManus and Lawrence were convicted in connection with the death of John C. Emgable, who was shot in April, 1923, when he was held up and robbed. According to their petitions for clemency, the robbery was plotted by others of the group of five implicated. Emgable was paymaster for a construction company and it was in the hope of obtaining the payroll that he was held up. McManus asks commutation on the ground he was the "child" of the group, that the jury recommended mercy and that he was influenced by older men. Lawrence bases his application on the plea that Joe Sweeney, another member of the group, was convicted of murder in the second degree.

Says Girl Killed Man

Oefinger was convicted for the death of Louis Hirsch, a Philadelphia store keeper. He claims a girl companion, Violet Dickerson, fired the shot and that Hirsch so stated before he died. In asking commutation, he claims the girl was found "not guilty" and that the ends of justice would be served by giving him a life sentence.

The death of Philip Flynn, Pittsburgh, who was shot during a hold-up, was responsible for the conviction of Albert Carrelli. The applicant claims he was in Burton, Ohio, on the night of the crime and that the other two men indicted jointly with him were found guilty of voluntary manslaughter and murder in the second degree. "Serious doubt" as to his guilt, claims that his "alleged" confession was obtained by the police by force and that he was a help in aiding his mother support the family are advanced as among the reasons for commutation.

Grant Adams, Berks county, was convicted for the death of Henry C. Stout, a Reading policeman, who arrested Adams and a companion as they were entering a store. He claims that he was given a "merciless and cruel" beating by Stout which placed his actions beyond "mental and physical control" and that in a "dazed state of semi-consciousness he, unknowingly and unintentionally committed the crime charged." In seeking commutation he claims the jury recommended mercy.

That doubt exists as to willful, deliberate and premeditated murder is advanced by Arthur Jordan, York, as his reason for commutation. He was convicted for the death of Wiley Fells Jordan, a hod carrier, claimed Fells who wheeled brick, taunted him and even threatened him for working fast. When he went to Fells' home to ask him to discontinue his taunts and apologize, he claims Fells made a threat as if he was about to shoot.

In voting its opposition, the directors let it be known that Adams county had nothing to gain or lose directly, but that the board was acting in a spirit of cooperation with York and Lancaster counties, the counties directly affected by the proposed structure.

The directors took favorable action on the recommendations of the committee on relations of the United States and State Chambers of Commerce in connection with the referendum the national body is conducting on proposed changes in the postal service, affecting the pay of such workers.

Greensville, Feb. 17.—The three young sons of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Sasfen, of near here, met death in Sandy Creek a short distance from their home late yesterday. The bodies of Stanley, 6, and Matthew, 3, were recovered. The creek is being dragged for the body of Edward, 5.

The mother told the boys they could go to the barn and play while she prepared a meal. When she called them they did not appear. Becoming alarmed, the mother summoned neighbors. The tracks of the boys led from the barn to the creek and a haled in the ice told the story of their fate.

Rescue parties cut the ice and at nightfall the first body was recovered. Later the second body was found.

URGENT APPEAL FOR CLOTHING

An urgent plea was made this morning for articles of clothing and furniture for the Red Cross rummage sale at the Gettysburg garage, York street, Thursday and Friday of this week. The articles should be left at the garage Wednesday afternoon, after 1 o'clock.

There has been an extraordinarily heavy drain upon the finances of the home service section of the Red Cross this winter, it is explained, and the need for ready money is still urgent. Almost every day, Red Cross officials stated, worthy persons are applying for aid or families in impoverished circumstances are being located, which must be helped, or dire circumstances will follow.

One aged couple in Gettysburg was learned of by the Red Cross in practically destitute circumstances. The Red Cross paid the rent for two months, and helped in other ways, together with other organizations, in relieving the condition of the couple. Another instance, cited by officials of the Red Cross, was the family of small children who had nothing but potatoes and water for food for several weeks. To help conditions such as these, it was stated, the rummage sale is to be held.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S TRAFFIC TALKS

DIRECT LAWS AT RECKLESS DRIVING

Reckless driving, but not ordinarily considered as such.

ONLY a very small percentage of the street and highway accidents today can be attributed directly to construction and engineering defects," declares the Committee on Engineering and Construction of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety in a report submitted to Secretary Hoover.

The committee emphasizes the need of providing right-of-way for parking spaces, for clear view at intersections, and for the future widening "before the cost of land becomes prohibitive."

"Grade crossing elimination through cooperation of municipalities, states and railroads must be the ultimate remedy for the railroad-highway grade-crossing peril," the Committee declares, with the continuing recommendations that "the creation of new grade crossings should be avoided wherever possible" even to the extent of relocating highways to avoid such difficulties.

Standard rules governing the exduct of travelers on the highway; uniform speed regulation aimed primarily at reckless driving; and examination and licensing of all motor vehicle operators, with a ban on the mentally or physically unfit as well as persons under 16 years of age or what cannot read English, are among the outstanding recommendations made by the Committee on Traffic Control of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety to Secretary Hoover.

Other important recommendations include:

That speed regulations should be directed primarily at reckless driving and should be uniform throughout the country. That communities should be empowered to fix speed limit zones, but should be required to mark the boundaries of such zones plainly; and should be prohibited from establishing a speed limit lower than 15 miles per hour.

That overtaking moving vehicles on sharp curves, approaching hill-crests, at intersections or at railroad crossings should be prohibited.

Reckless driving, but not ordinarily considered as such.

The FREE TRADERS

By Victor Rousseau

All about among the fallen rocks were mounds, the residue from the pans after the extraction of the gold, now covered with tangles of dead vegetation.

There was no longer any doubt that this was Pelly's gold mine.

Before making further investigations here, Lee decided to explore the remainder of the chasm. It ran on beyond the bend for a quarter of a mile, and then came to an abrupt termination. Without any gradual lessening of the depth it simply ceased, the two cliff walls coming together, in the same way as they did near the rocky stone at the other end. The chasm was, in fact, simply an elongated crater.

Returning, Lee made his way to the cave formed by the explosion. If Pelly was in the district, there was hardly any doubt but that he would be hiding in that inaccessible spot, where he would be safe against discovery. It was not unlikely that he was in the cave itself at that moment.

Lee first examined the snow about the mouth of the cave for footprints, but he found no tracks except his own. Drawing his automatic, he advanced into the opening. The sand in the interior bore the marks of continued tramping, but there were no imprints with clear edges, and it was certain that no one had been there for a long time.

Unfortunately, Lee had brought no candle, but he advanced some distance within the cave, lighting his way with matches. However, it was a foregone conclusion that Pelly was not in there, for the sandy interior bore no fresh footprints as far as he went.

A faint, distant roaring, as of a waterfall, came to Lee's ears, and the air was fresh, as if the cave were connected with some opening in the mountain side. Lee resolved to explore it another day. But it was clear enough that Pelly was not in the chasm after all. Another thing that led Lee to that conclusion was the fact that no mining operations had been carried on there for a considerable time—long enough for the pans to have rusted through.

If Pelly had taken refuge within the gorge, it was incredible that he would not have resumed operations.

And these seemed to have been interrupted unexpectedly, to judge from the exposure of the pans to wind and weather.

Perplexed and disappointed, Lee turned his thoughts toward the capture of the man who had attacked him in the tunnel. He could no doubt throw light on Pelly's whereabouts. Perhaps he was the assistant of whom Joyce had spoken.

Lee expected that he would be lurking in the tunnel, ready to renew his attack, but this time there should be no such fiasco as before.

Lee made his way back on the opposite side of the gorge. Here there was a thick growth of dwarfed scrub laurel, which had taken root in the soil brought down by the little stream, and bordered it, extending back from it toward the cliff in a sort of miniature jungle. Something protruding out of this growth arrested Lee's attention.

It was a wooden cross carved with the name HELENE PELLY, standing up above a low cairn of boulders.

Lee stood and looked, and vaguely mournful thoughts coursed through his mind. It was a sad and lonely burying place for Joyce's mother. Its existence there was in itself a testimony to the old man's mental condition—that he should have carried his wife's body through the tunnel to that place of his dreams. And yet it was certain that no prowling thing would ever violate that grave.

Lee went on, and, a few steps further, stumbled against something else.

It was the skeleton of a man, the bones protruding through the rents and tatters of the scarecrow clothes. The laurel tangles sprouted between the ribs. The bones were bleached white, the flesh had long since disappeared. One bony hand still tightly clutched the handle of a large, old-fashioned revolver. The muzzle was choked with rust; there were rusted cartridges inside.

Disengaging it with difficulty from the fingers, Lee saw, on the less rusted portion of the handle which they had protected, the initials, C. P.

But he hardly needed that to know that his mission was at an end, and the last barrier between himself and Joyce overthrown.

The problem so inscrutable an hour before had been solved. All cause for antagonism between them had come to an end.

And Lee was conscious of a quiet satisfaction. It was the happiest solution, and though Joyce would grieve, she would come to see that it was the best. She would be glad, after the first shock, that her father would not have to face the ordeal which he had dreaded for so many years.

But as Lee looked down at the remains of the dead man, he became aware of a single fact. Nearly every bone on one side of the skeleton was broken—the skull, ribs, arm and leg bones, and pelvis.

Then Pelly had not died of a stroke or from a sudden attack of heart failure. He had fallen from the summit of the cliff above—perhaps he had been flung down, for the revolver which he had been clutching showed that he had either encountered or anticipated an enemy.

And, filled with a mixture of emotions—happiness for their future, grief for the news that he must break to Joyce, Lee made his way toward the tunnel.

But all at once he made the singular and unexpected discovery that he did not know where the entrance was.

CHAPTER XII

Freed by a Lock of Hair

It seemed to him that it would be a simple matter enough to ascend the cliff again, and he had not taken the precaution to take note of landmarks. Now, however, he discovered that the lower third of the granite wall was scored with hundreds of holes and fissures where the friable limestone had crumbled away, or had been washed out by the streams.

The entrance to the cliff tunnel was somewhere on that side of the chasm, some little distance from the bend—but where?

Lee stepped back to the brink of the stream and looked up, trying to locate the rocking stone or monoliths for a guide, but the upper incline of the cliff hid them from view.

It was high noon. Lee set himself to the task before him. He looked about him, trying to orientate himself. It would be necessary to ascend to a point about one-fourth the distance up the cliff in order to discover the ingress, which was no wider than any of numerous cavities in the wall.

Plenty of places along the chasm afforded access, and Lee grasped a projecting rock which seemed familiar, and began to ascend, digging his hands and feet into the holes, until he found it impossible to proceed farther. Swinging to the right, he discovered a large cavity and thrust his arm in up to the shoulder.

A bitter disappointment awaited him, however, for at the end his hand encountered only a smooth surface of rock.

He tried again as he descended, thrusting his arms into all the likely crevices in the vain attempt to find the orifice.

He descended, selected another place and scrambled up the wall again, only to achieve the same negative result.

And when he reached the bottom of the cliff again, and looked up at the impenetrable crevices, he realized that not only did he not know at which point to begin the ascent, but he did not know how high to climb before he reached the level of the tunnel entrance.

He looked up at the huge cliff, with its inward incline, and scored with its myriads of mocking mouths, and now a sort of fury took hold of him. Again and again he scrambled up and clung like a fly to the cliff's face; scrambled down, baffled, and then began once more.

It was now the middle of the afternoon, and he was no nearer a solution. He had accomplished nothing. He was becoming bewildered. It was necessary to proceed in a systematic way.

Arendtsville Five Beats Fayetteville

The Arendtsville Apple Pickers scored an easy victory over the Fayetteville five Saturday evening, the score being 16 to 5. The game was played at Arendtsville. The first was a passing spectacle, with neither side having an advantage. The Apple Pickers, however, took advantage of breaks in the second half and scored frequently.

G-BURG RIFLES LOSE FIRST SHOOT

The Gettysburg rifle team shot its first league match with Johns Hopkins last week and lost by a score of 1862 to 1796. This came as no surprise to the home team since this was the first four position match ever fired at the college. Few teams can defeat Gettysburg's riflemen in the prone position, but when it comes to getting at the target in the other three positions the boys need a little steadier nerve.

In the league last week it is found that George Washington defeated Pittsburgh, Georgetown defeated Carnegie and Saint John's defeated Lafayette. Gettysburg's score was higher by fifty or more points than of Lafayette and Saint John's, both veteran four position match shooters. With this initial score the team is not discouraged but is continuing in its faithful practice.

The aggregate score of the five high men are as follows:

	St.	K.	Sl.	P.
C. O. Telfer	80	90	96	100
A. R. Cattell	81	92	91	99
P. Leatherman	83	88	92	99
D. E. Manges	77	81	95	100
W. L. Plank	85	76	91	100

Total ... 406 427 465 498
Sum ... 1796

The last prone position match scheduled was shot last Friday with the Virginia Military Institute which was defeated by four hundred ninety-nine to four hundred eighty-six.

Verne Brandt, Robert Lau, Russell Fissel, Frank Berkheimer and Merwin Lau.

On Friday evening, February 20, the Junior class of the local high school will present a comedy, "Tim Delano's Courtship," in the P. O. S. of A. Hall, this place, and on Saturday evening the Senior class will hold a food sale.

DENTAL WEEK BE OBSERVED HERE

Dental Health Week, under the auspices of the Pennsylvania State Dental Society and with the cooperative efforts of the state department of health and education, will be observed here during the week beginning February 22nd.

School medical inspection shows that 70 per cent of all school children have tooth defects and the reason is usually faulty diet, lack of hygiene or neglected care of the teeth due to ignorance of the need for it.

The dental profession of Pennsylvania will conduct an educational campaign from which great good is expected.

This is the first state to conduct a public dental week and the result will be eagerly watched by the dental societies of other states.

WHEN MEN ARE CALLED

In the finding of the body of Floyd Collins, entombed for seventeen days in Sand Cave, we find the world marveling at the fortitude and patience as well as the untiring and ceaseless efforts of that little band of rescue workers, who labored day and night, digging, picking and hammering away at resistless obstacles in an effort to penetrate to the vein that would lead them to the trapped man.

While some of the rescue-workers were intimate acquaintances of the entombed man, the majority of them were absolute strangers, called in because of their mining ability and knowledge of the underground. The mere call for help from the heretofore unknown Sand Cave brought hundreds of responses from the country over, and those who were accepted struggled with that relentless task that bespeaks the milk of human kindness of which this old world is made.

And it only reminds us the more that "there is so much good in the worst of us," that it little behooves any of us to begrudge a single bit of appreciativeness that one may be entitled to, and oftentimes never receives.

Excess of grief for the deceased is madness, for it is an injury to the living, and the dead know it not.

Those who consent to the act and those who do it shall be punished equally.

The greatest skill is shown in hiding our skill.

The times change, and we change with them.

CONFIDENCE

You did not jolt their faith, and say,
And carve that boasted honored name
Of yours upon the business world?
How did it all commence?
Look back across the years, old man,
And find the minute you began
To prove your worth to business men
And win their confidence.

Did you put off from day to day
The kindly words which you could say?
Did you devote your early years
To selfishness and crime?
Did you go out and play the cheat
And lie to men you chanced to meet,
Expecting you could right it all
At some less trying time?

Or was it your experience
You won your fellow's confidence
By earning it in little things?
You sought it from the start.

Well, how about that little lad,
Who looks to you and calls you dad?
And how about his confidence?
Of course the boy is small,
But if you do not now begin
His utmost faith in you to win,
If you are not his best friend now
You'll never be at all!

You cannot lose his love today
And call it back when you are gray.
You cannot break his faith in you
And mend it later on;
You've got to find the time somehow
To be that youngster's father now,
For once you lose his confidence
It is forever gone.

104 INVITED TO INAUGURATION IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

Harrisburg, Feb. 17.—Governor Pinchot yesterday announced the names of 104 prominent men and women who, in addition to himself and Mrs. Pinchot, have been invited to represent Pennsylvania at the inauguration of President Coolidge in Washington March 4.

The following letter was sent by the governor to those whom he has asked to participate in the inauguration:

"Will you give me the pleasure of numbering you among the Pennsylvanians who will officially represent the commonwealth at the inauguration of President Coolidge on March 4 next? I hope very greatly that you will."

"The committee in charge of arrangements for the inauguration of President Coolidge in Washington on March 4 next has asked that the representation of states in the inaugural parade by military organizations heretofore customary shall be discontinued, and that instead each governor shall be accompanied by from fifty to one hundred citizens selected by him, who shall take their place in the parade in automobiles."

Packed Houses Greet Showing
Local Movies of and Lincoln

Abraham Lincoln (George Billings) and his Family

Large crowds filled the Photoplay Theater at both shows Monday evening to see the initial presentation of the Armistice Day Legion local movies and the super-production "Abraham Lincoln." In the afternoon the G. A. R. were guests of the legion at a special matinee, while this afternoon the school children were given an opportunity of seeing the photoplay at a special offering.

The Lincoln picture proved highly entertaining as well as educational and this evening's two shows are also expected to be well attended.

The Lincoln picture is a straightforward portrayal of the dramatic incidents of the birth, romance, climactic events and death of the martyred president. It starts with his birth in the pioneer cabin during a blinding blizzard when the entire family almost perished from starvation.

At the age of seven young Abe accompanied his family from Kentucky to the new state of Indiana. Here Nancy Hanks Lincoln, Abe's mother, died. A year later Thomas Lincoln, the father, married a childhood friend, Sarah Bush Johnson, whose devotion to young Abe and protection in giving him an education were marked factors in his later success. All these scenes are depicted in the picture with touching realism.

After the family moved again to Illinois and Sarah Lincoln died, Abe went to work, building a flatboat with which to carry cargoes down the Mississippi to New Orleans. His first trip was momentous. At New Salem he first saw Anne Rutledge, whose name has been connected with Lincoln's in one of the prettiest romances of history.

Memories of Anne brought him back to New Salem, where he worked under difficulties, felling the town bully who disliked him because of his studious ways. Lincoln was leader of volunteers against the Black Hawk Indians, but on his return he found that his partner had drunk up the assets of the store, leaving them $1,000 in debt, an obligation Lincoln assumed.

He mastered surveying in six weeks and was appointed surveyor for Sangamon county.

At twenty-seven he was studying law in Springfield. The next ten years saw him a circuit rider and finally a congressman. He was nominated for the senate but sacrificed himself in order to keep the election from an undesirable candidate. The repeal of the Missouri Compromise seemed to him an open challenge on the slavery question and in his debates with Douglas he stated his position so clearly that although he was defeated for the senate he removed all chance that Douglas would ever be president.

In a highly sensational party caucus Lincoln was nominated for president and elected in a heated campaign. In the meantime he had married Mary Todd, who bore him two sons, and the entire family moved to Washington to take up residence at the White House. The trying period of the war, the moments of misery in his own household and the death of one son, the critical days, the dissension in his cabinet and disloyalty among his friends all played their part in the great man's life before his final victory.

In the very moment of triumph Lincoln was killed. The picture is replete with little known incidents of Lincoln's life, and is remarkable for the bigness of theme, heart interest and the fidelity and spectacular grandeur with which it has been filmed.

NO WOOD USED IN NEWSPAPER HOME

Building Housing Philadelphia
Inquirer to be of Steel
Throughout; Is on Stilts.

Workmen are putting the finishing touches to the Elverson Building at Broad and Callowhill streets, which is to be the new home of The Philadelphia Inquirer. The building is expected to be ready for occupancy within a few months and when completed will be the largest and most modern newspaper building in the world.

The structure is twenty-one stories high and covers an entire city block. The ground area is approximately 70,000 square feet. In designing the building architectural engineers performed a feat that is considered without parallel in building construction. The huge structure has been erected above the depressed tracks of a railroad. It is virtually a skyscraper built upon stilts. Trains will pass beneath it, and this feature is considered one of the greatest innovations in modern newspaper building construction.

The present circulation of The Inquirer necessitates the use of more than forty carloads of newsprint paper a week. The cost of haulage per year of this great amount of material alone amounts to a small fortune at present.

In the new Inquirer plant this expense will be eliminated. The cars of paper instead of being parked at a distant freight station and their contents placed upon trucks for delivery to the pressroom will be shipped to directly beneath the building. There they will be unloaded upon a special platform and conveyed by special machinery to a storeroom from which they will be used as the presses require.

When The Inquirer moves into the new Elverson Building the entire mechanical equipment necessary in getting out a great newspaper will be new. Presses, linotype machines, typewriters, time clocks, adding machines, stereotyping machines, photo-engraving apparatus and all other machinery now used in the present Inquirer plant will be scrapped and the huge task of publishing The Inquirer will be accomplished by freshly made and highly improved devices.

The pressroom equipment will be most modern. Four batteries of presses totaling 690 feet in length will occupy a room in which space has been allowed for further expansion.

From the presses the papers will be conveyed to a delivery room by special machinery and from there sent by train, trolley and motor truck to various distribution points.

The new home of The Inquirer towers above surrounding buildings and stands out in Philadelphia's rapidly changing skyline. Its gilded dome can be seen from almost every part of the city and in some of its suburbs. Beneath it there is a clock which will rival that in the City Hall, which is close by and which for years has been looked upon by residents as the chief governor of their daily actions.

But the clock in the tower of the Elverson Building is expected to excel that in the City Hall. Operated by it will be a series of chimes, which during the day and night will announce at fifteen-minute intervals the exact time. For the benefit of those living beyond the range of hearing, a system of light flashes will be transmitted from the uppermost part of the building at hourly intervals. This, however, is only one of several innovations by which The Inquirer from its new home hopes to be able to serve the community.

The new building is the result of an ambition entertained for years by Colonel James Elverson, Jr., president and publisher of The Inquirer. The growth of The Inquirer under his direction has been such that the paper has long since outgrown its present plant.

The site of the new building was chosen by the publisher only after the consideration of many other possible locations, and those who have made a study of the growth of the city cannot help but approve of his decision.

The architecture and construction of the building are simple. The entire building is faced with glazed white terra cotta over its structural steel, enclosed in concrete and brilliantly bathed in the light from 130 flood lights at night. No wood is used, even the window frames and doors being of pressed steel.

The floors of the building and tower up to the seventh floor will be occupied by executive offices of The Inquirer.

Happiness is engendered by sympathy, love, faithfulness, courage. It is born, perhaps most often of all, of service. This is a very old philosophy, but it will last much longer than the new.

Accused of Killing Wife and Two Children

RUSSELL MORTON & STATE'S ATTY. HUSTER; MRS. MORTON & MORTON HOME

After the bodies of his wife and two daughters had been found with their throats cut, Russell Morton, twenty-eight, was locked up in the Cumberland, Md., jail, charged with their murder. Morton is shown above being questioned by State's Attorney William A. Husten. The murder of Mrs. Morton and her daughters took place in their little home in Paradise, Maryland, and their bodies were buried in a lonely spot in the mountains near Cumberland. Morton is said to have been an active member of a religious sect, and that arguments on religion caused differences between him and his wife.

SEEK COUNTY AID AGAINST BRIDGE

Counties Asked to Join in Protest Against Privately-Owned Bridge Over River at Wrightsville.

Officials of organizations at York which are protesting against the erection of a privately owned vehicular bridge between Wrightsville and Columbia are seeking the assistance of Adams county residents. The secretary of one York body Saturday got in touch with the officials of several civic organizations here with a view of having the citizens of Adams county help in sending in protests to Congressman Glatfelter against the privately-owned structure.

The project for a privately owned vehicular bridge received one boost and two knocks in Washington.

Reported favorably

The senate commerce committee Friday reported the Pepper-Griest bill favorably and it was placed on the senate calendar, where it may be passed within a few days. The house committee delayed taking similar action, placing the bill in the hands of a sub-committee, after a telegram was received from the Lancaster Chamber protesting passage of the bill, and Congressman Samuel F. Glatfelter, of York, introduced a bill giving congressional consent to the construction of a bridge by the commissioners of York and Lancaster counties.

A flood of objections to a privately owned bridge reached Congressman Glatfelter and members of the house interstate and foreign commerce committee from individuals and organizations in both counties. It is not impossible, according to a Washington observer, that these objections will result in such delay that the bill authorizing the construction of a bridge by private capital will not be passed at this session of congress.

THIS WOMAN'S REMARKABLE RECOVERY

Entirely Due To Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Forest City, Iowa. — "My first child lived only a short time and I was sick for a year after. When I bent over and raised myself up again I could almost scream with pain in my back. One day I was so bad that I had to leave my washing and get ready to go to the doctor. He gave me medicine but it did no more good than if I drank just water.

Once when we had been in town a little book telling about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was left in our car. I have taken five bottles of the Vegetable Compound now and I do all my housework and help with the milking and taking care of chickens and garden. Besides I have a fine baby girl eight months old, just the picture of health and I am feeling fine myself. You may use this letter as a testimonial and I will answer any letters asking about the Vegetable Compound."

Cod Liver Oil In Sugar Coated Tablets For Puny Kids

Forget the nasty tasting, stomach upsetting cod liver oil and give the thin, puny, underdeveloped children McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets if you want to give them a good appetite and put pounds of good, healthy flesh on their bones.

Doctors know all about them and so does Peoples Drug store and P. W. Stallsmith and all good pharmacists all over America, for they are in great demand, because they are not "sugarcoats" but show results in a few days.

They are not expensive either—60 tablets—60 cents and children take them like candy.

Chats with Your Gas Man

NOW is a good time to take an inventory of your home and yourself—a regular, business-like inventory for 1925.

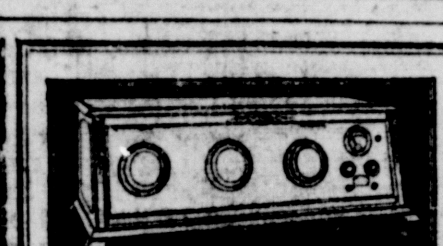

Have you in your home any inefficient, worn-out gas equipment which should be replaced by new and up-to-date types? How about your gas range? Will it cook 1098 meals during 1925 in a way that will give satisfaction?

And how about hot water service? If you are still a victim of the tea-kettle method of heating water, how long will you remain in this class? If you are using a gas water heater, how many years has it been on the job?

Think, also, about the house-heating question. Do you have to heat the whole house to keep one room warm just for a few hours each day? Have you ever given your gas company an opportunity to show you how gas service actually saves money for you?

Start 1925 right. Take an inventory now.

OF TAX ISSUEProvides For Revision of County Tax Collection System in State Now Before Legislature.

Passage of the bill for revision of the county tax collecting system, introduced in the General Assembly this week by Rep. Ludlow, Montgomery, is urged by Mrs. John O. Miller, chairman of the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters, in her weekly legislative letter, tonight. The letter discusses several other measures, including the administration prohibition bill and the measure to ratify the child labor amendment and takes up the financial controversy.

In commenting on the investigation of the differing estimates of $124,000,000 of Auditor General Lewis and $132,850,000 of the administration, the letter said:

"It developed later that a New York accountant, familiar with state budgets, sat with the joint committee at the request of Mr. Sterling, giving rise to the belief that legislative leaders were preparing a third estimate which would represent a compromise. If they decide to accept the King estimate, as appears likely, it will be because they want more money to appropriate."

"Pointing out that the House appropriations committee voted to abandon the administration lump sum method for hospital appropriations, Mr. Miller cited the bill introduced by Rep. Heffernan, Philadelphia, to appropriate $2,000,000 for hospitals, not state-owned or aided, to pay for services to indigent sick and injured and declared "this is the lump sum idea which is bound to gain ground."

"In voting against it," Mrs. Miller added, "the House committee voted against the best interests of hospitals."

After outlining the provisions of the dry bill for regulation of breweries and distilleries the letter said it appears to be the Governor's plan "to push the bill so that opponents may be brought into the open for quick disposition."

"Opposition will come from many sources," the letter added, "some of which will afford, perhaps unconsciously, a blind for the hostility of bootleggers who view present conditions as an opportunity to get rich quick. Thus, concerns who use alcohol legitimately will be stirred up to fight the bill on the alleged ground that its provisions provide for intrusion into private business. The drys are hopeful of winning a speedy majority in the Senate; they are not so sure of the House."

In urging passage of the Ludlow tax collection bill, Mrs. Miller said this was the major proposal on the legislative program of the league. This, she said, is the third successive legislature in which it has been introduced and failure to win a majority support heretofore, she declared,

Heat

For pain - soreness

Rheumatic pains, soreness, aches, etc., call for heat. The best way to apply it is Red Pepper Rub.

This is the modern way. It so exceeds the old ways that there is no comparison.

Nothing else creates such concentrated, such penetrating heat as Red Pepper Rub. And heat that doesn't hurt you.

You feel that tingling heat in an instant. In three minutes it seems to penetrate the depths. Circulation is started, congestion is relieved. Pain and the soreness go.

What folly it is to suffer pains so easily and quickly stopped. What folly to let a cold in the chest go neglected. When trouble starts at night, what folly to wait until morning.

Keep Red Pepper Rub on hand. Homes which do that save a great deal of pain. Get it now—the very utmost in help of this kind.
